

Kevin Desrouilleres is a meticulous plumbing and fire protection engineer who provides strong leadership on complex projects.

Kevin joined Altieri in 2011 and leads the firm's plumbing and fire protection department. He contributes extensive experience across a diverse range of projects, including museums, higher education, theatre and performing arts venues, private residences, and parks and landscape infrastructure. Kevin trains plumbing and fire protection staff in systems design, engineering calculations, and BIM coordination. As a plumbing engineer, Kevin designs water, sanitary, storm and gas systems, as well as specialty systems including compressed air and non-medical gas systems. His fire protection expertise includes wet and dry systems as well as clean agent suppression systems. Throughout all project phases, Kevin conducts detailed engineering calculations, oversees contract document production, coordinates closely architects, consultants and other engineering trades, and manages construction administration to help ensure successful project delivery.
